

THE CHURCHILL STATUE PROJECT

Why it's important:

Sir Winston Churchill was one of the greatest political leaders of the twentieth century.

The Sir Winston Churchill Society of Calgary wishes to keep his legacy alive with a statue and in commemoration of his 1929 visit to Alberta.

We wish to:

- Honour the hundreds of Calgarians, other Canadians, and allies from the Commonwealth and beyond who fought in the Second World War, including those who died.
- Recall Churchill's contribution to human flourishing, freedom, and human progress. That included opposing anti-Semitism worldwide and proposed anti-black segregation in the United Kingdom during the Second World War.
- Remember Churchill as an early social reformer whose work included advocacy for those he described as the "left-out millions." Churchill's earliest political advocacy included lobbying for pensions, unemployment insurance, and a minimum wage for the "sweated trades."
- Remember Churchill's lifetime and leadership, especially as an early critic of tyranny and as a war-time leader.

Edmonton sculptor Danek Mozdzewski has created the statue of Sir Winston Churchill and his previous work includes sculptures of the late Alberta Lieutenant Governor Lois Hole; the jazz musician and blues singer, Clarence Horatio Miller; Alberta suffragist Nellie McClung, Brock University's $1.2 million monument to Sir Isaac Brock, and the Lester B. Pearson monument on Parliament Hill.

Relevancy to Canada and Alberta

In 1929, Churchill visited Alberta. His tour included the Turner Valley oil fields, the Prince of Wales ranch, Calgary and the Canadian Rockies, where Churchill created several paintings. While in Calgary, Churchill gave a speech at the Palliser Hotel, and was given an off-white Stetson hat, a hat that he would keep for his entire life and often wear while painting. At Lake Louise, Churchill described it as a "truly enchanting scene". Churchill said that in any of his travels over four continents, the comfort and beauty of Lake Louise had "never been surpassed".

SPECIFICS

The Churchill statue will be 1.5 times Churchill's actual size and is bronzed.

LOCATION

McDougall Centre is situated in the core of Calgary in an historic building that first served as a school. With grounds open to the public, it is an ideal location for the statue as visitors to the grounds will be able to view this new work of art along with another existing memorial to the Second World War - the Airmen's statue. Located on the south lawn, the statue will face southwest to symbolize Churchill's love for both the vistas of southern Alberta and to the west, the Canadian Rockies.

My great-grandfather loved your country. He recorded the beauty of Alberta in his paintings during his 1929 visit, and spoke warmly of its grandeur. In September 1941, speaking in London at a dinner to honour Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, he memorably said: 'Canada is the linchpin of the English-speaking world.'

On behalf of the Churchill family, we are grateful to you all for continuing to keep alive the memory of Churchill and for supporting our shared and hard-won legacy of freedom.

— With my very best, RANDOLPH CHURCHILL III

WINSTON CHURCHILL

When Churchill arrived in Calgary on a Saturday morning, August 24, 1929, he walked across the CPR train station platform and gazed westward at the Rockies and remarked that "What a glorious day! I can just see the peaks of the Rockies from here!"

According to Bradley Tolpannen in his book, Churchill in North America, 1929, Churchill was fascinated by southern Alberta. At the Turner Valley oil fields, he would write to his wife, Clementine, that they were "amazing" and speculated he might buy 1,000 shares in Alberta-based oil firms.

The only place that Churchill ever spoke of retiring to – part from his home in Kent - was Alberta, such was his love of the province and its sense of boundless possibilities. It is fitting that the greatest champion of liberty of the 20th century should be commemorated in such a magnificent way in Calgary.

Observed in his proper historical context, we see a man who insisted on the equality of all races before the law throughout the Empire throughout his career, who put his life on the line many times to defend the indigenous populations of the Empire, and who defeated and destroyed history's worst racist, Adolf Hitler. Churchill adored Canada, and it is wonderful to see Canadians return the tribute.
